

Rights for Women in Relationships

1. The right to share equally with a partner in all decisions and responsibilities related to the relationship, children, home, and finances.
2. The right to grow and explore personal potential without feeling guilty, selfish, or afraid; to have and express needs and desires without feeling selfish, demanding or aggressive.
3. The right to express opinions and have them given the same respect and considerations as those of your mate.
4. The right to hold your mate responsible for his behavior rather than assuming that responsibility yourself.
5. The right to NEVER be physically attacked or psychologically degraded by a mate and the right to terminate the relationship if either occurs.
6. The right to not blame yourself if the relationship in which you have invested so much love and effort ends.